Day 4.

Coming back to Kyzyl.

Free time at the yurt camp.

You can order a shaman kamlanie or throat-singing concert*.

Kamlaniye is a magical communication between shamans and spirits. During this ritual the shamans dance around the fire, sing and beat a drum. Kamlaniye will leave a long lasting impression, nobody remains indifferent after this ritual. There the shamans will tell you about their traditions, rituals and abilities. After that you will get an opportunity to ask them about your future, your health and experience the ritual of purification*.

The performance of traditional throat singing - khoomei. It's a fantastical capability of the Tuva people (and some other Middle-Eastern nationalities) to emit simultaneously two or three sounds of different tone and to sustain the same sound for 25-30 seconds without taking a breath. If you close your eyes it is hard to believe that the sounds are emitted by a person and not by a musical instrument.
